FACT SHEET

Jacob's Cure is a 501c3, non-profit foundation that was created in September 2000. Jordana Holovach is the Founder and Director of Jacob's Cure. She created the foundation because of her passion to save the life of her son, Jacob, who is afflicted with Canavan disease, a fatal genetic brain disorder. The sole mission of Jacob's Cure is to fund research in Canavan disease that aims to cure thousands of children dying of Canavan disease today. Jacob's Cure proudly allocates 95% of monies raised to research, this made possible due to volunteer staff and minimal overhead. Areas of research include gene-therapy, stem cell transplantation, pharmacological approaches and basic science in understanding the pathways of the disease. Accomplishments include a successful gene-therapy trial including 24 Canavan patients at Cooper Hospital / Robert Wood Johnson and a pharmaceutical trial that has been approved for 15 Canavan patients also at Cooper Hospital at the direction of Dr. Paola Leone, Director of the Canavan Research Lab at Cooper. Because Canavan is considered a rare disorder, federal funding is scarce. It is through the efforts of Jacob's Cure and the philanthropy of others that enables Canavan research to continue and a cure for Canavan a hopeful reality.
